

Art investment shows 14% annually

Art is one of few investments which has a proven track record of showing a consistent return despite the state of the global economy. On average, contemporary art has shown a return of 14% per annum over the last 25 years, as reported by CNBC. Last year, auctioneers Sotheby's sold a record $7.3bn (£5.8bn) worth of art and other collectibles – the most in their 277-year history, with Christies selling an additional $7.1bn (£5.7bn) – their best results in five years. The current market conditions are extremely favourable for both new and existing collectors and investors who are seeing their portfolios increase substantially in value.

At Florence Bell Gallery they have made the art market accessible to investors of all calibre, priding themselves on offering the best of

John Hoyland, 18.4.73, 1973, acrylic on canvas, 28in by 28in.
Contact Florence Bell to reserve.

British art for collectors and investors alike. They work very closely with their network, some of whom have over 30 years of experience, to deliver outstanding service and provide pieces from some of the most sought-after artists of modern times. Whether you are looking for your next investment or a piece to complete your home or office, they have the perfect solution for you.

Call 020 3883 8072, visit florencebellgallery.com or email info@florencebellgallery.com to find out more.

Investment value can go down as well as up and you may get back less than you put in. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance.